The McConnells

Dwight and Heather are developing and leading a new department of Health Care Ministries called Community Health Evangelism. They go into locations a few months ahead of HCM medical teams and do community health assessment. Then, working together with national pastors, missionaries and community leaders in the area, a long-term strategy to address the priority health issues will be determined. Through training in Community Health Evangelism and strategically designed teams, they help empower the church to become a key influence in the renewal of the spiritual and physical health of their community.

The Rogers

Andy and Robin Rogers previously served as missionary associates in Central America, as missions pastors in the West Florida District, and have led or been part of many construction, relief and development missions teams. Andy has a degree in electrical engineering and worked in the power industry for 32 years. Serving as missionary associates with Sustain Hope since 2010, their vision and focus is to help pastors and churches become more effective in reaching their communities with the compassion and love of Jesus Christ.
